

■ Making lists is useful writing

© Commonwealth of Australia 2006

■ What we do and what it means

Grandma makes a list, saying, 'Now Carl, what do we need to buy at the supermarket?'

When we write in front of children and talk to them about it, they learn that writing helps us to carry information and to remember things.

Later, children will learn that various kinds of writing look different – a list goes down the page; a message to someone goes from left to right across the page – and that they serve different purposes for us.

An Australian Government initiative, funded by the Department of Education, Science and Training